

thehole

The hole aims to emphasize different usages and perceptions of the same place between different types of users.

The Main Building of Bauhaus Universität is considered monumental, therefore tours are organized everyday. This causes the visitation of tourists besides the daily use of students, academic staff and various officials, thus the number of users and accordingly the experiences are also diversified.

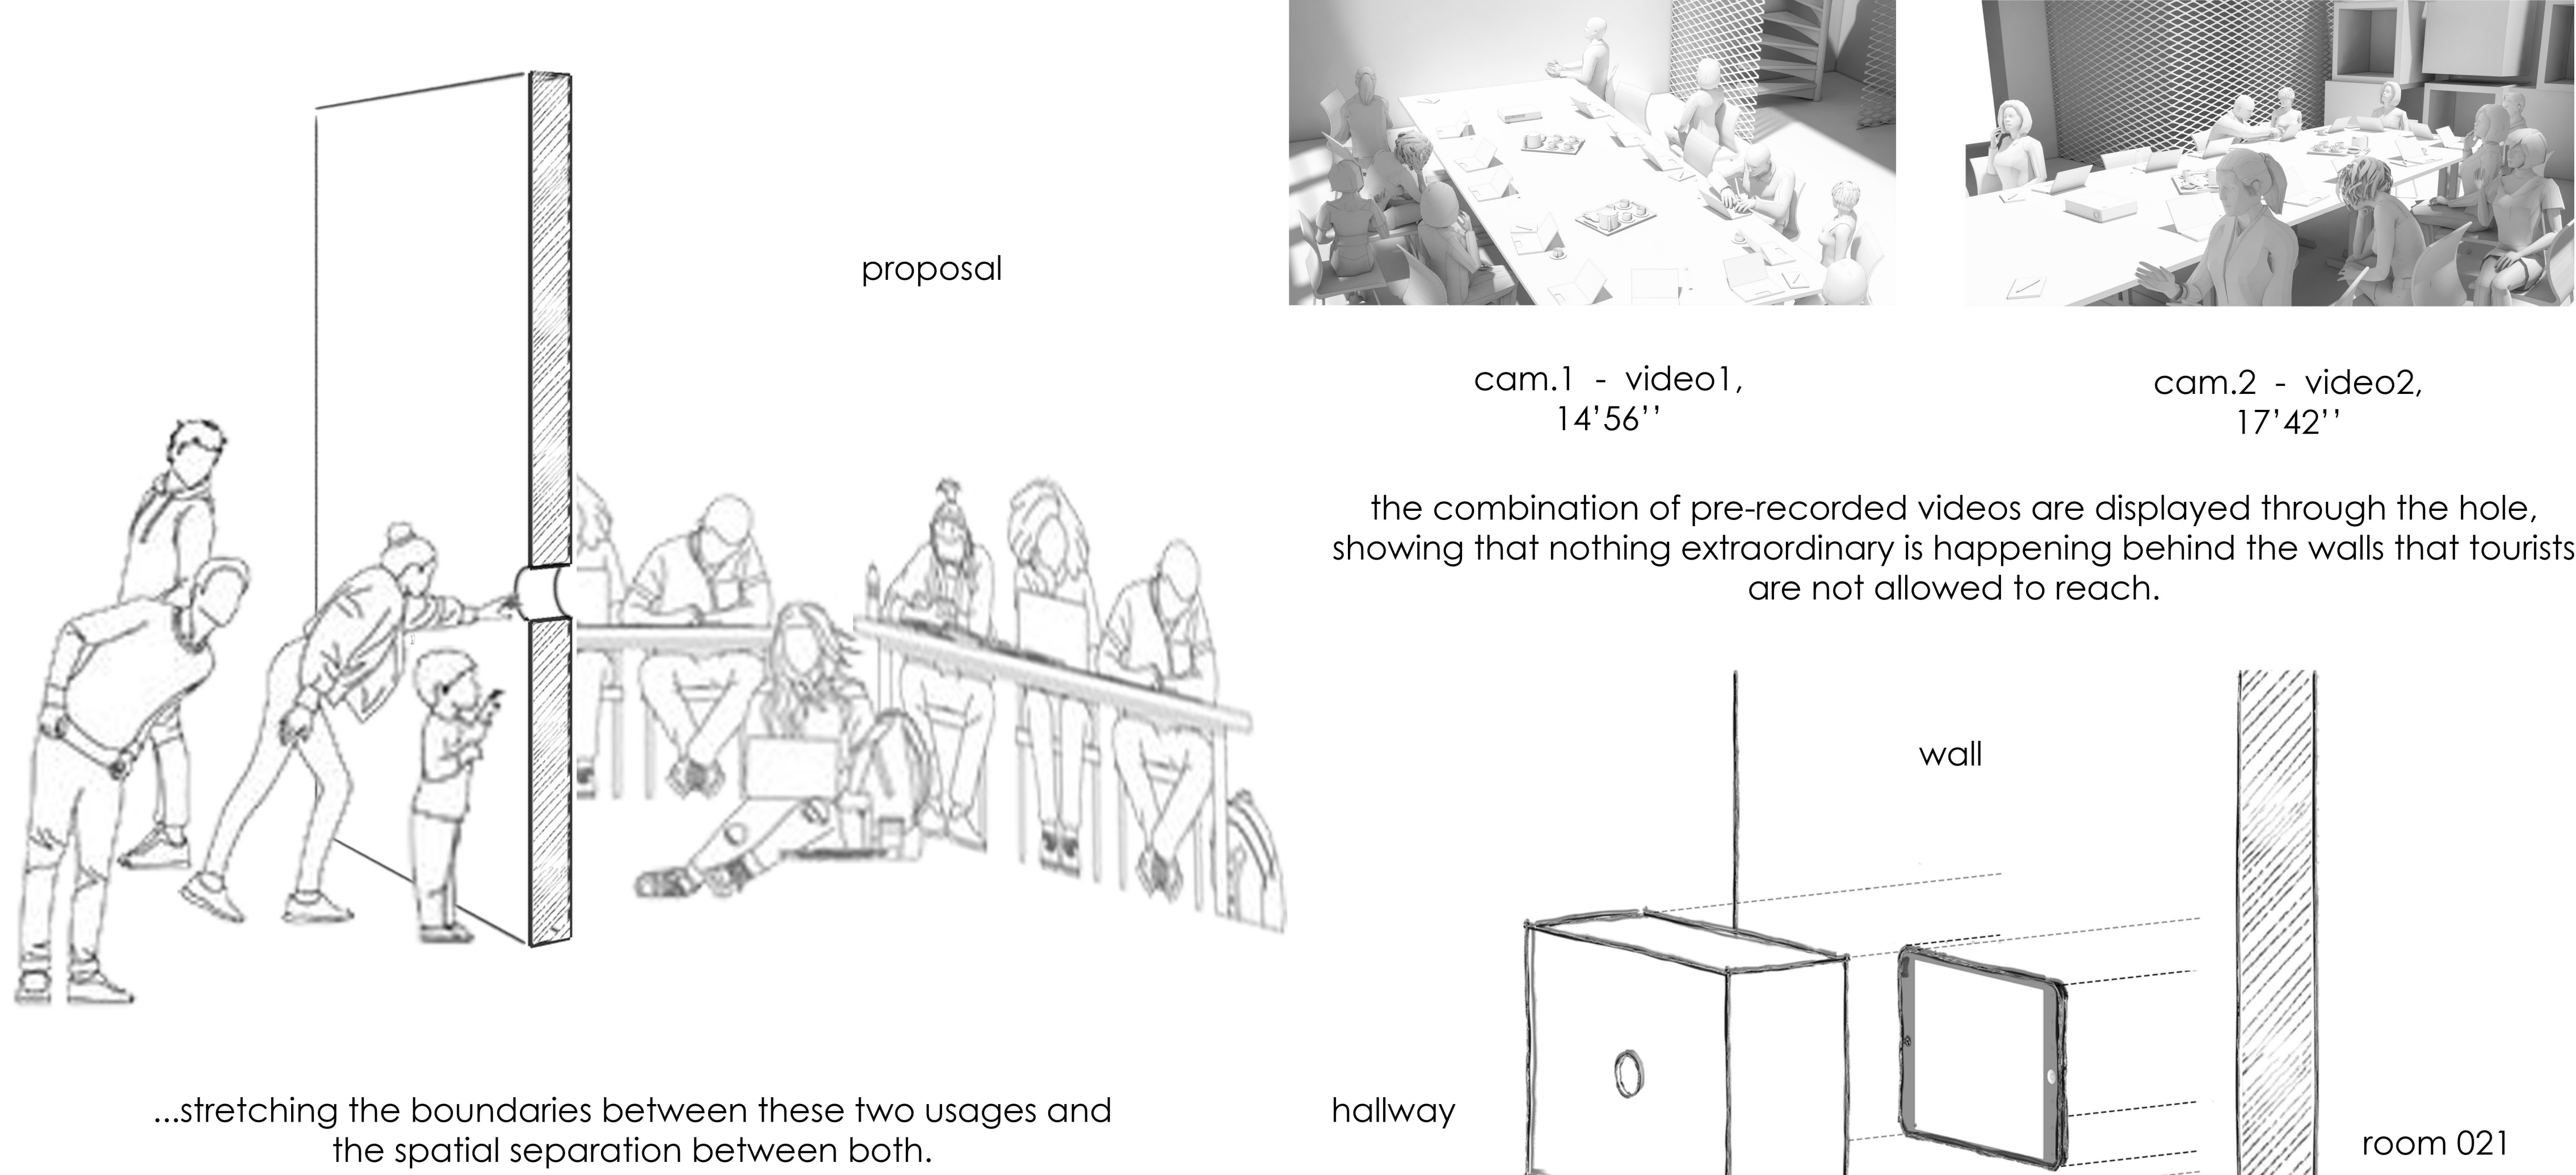

A single space is able to provide us endless possibilities of use. Not defining a place with a fixed program causes all uses to be “misuse”.

The conceptual project acts as a peephole,...

two cameras are placed at eye level during a regular class and the room was recorded in two different angles

...stretching the boundaries between these two usages and the spatial separation between both.

While the Main Building is thought as a meaningful place for someone who is here as a tourist, it may refer to different things and relations for a student who spends every day there. The hole itself, aims to represent the gap between the perceptions of different users. Thus, different gazes are addressed.

images from go4spring exhibition, Bauhaus Universität Weimar